

winereviewonline

Château de Chamirey, Mercurey

(Burgundy France) Clos de la Maladière 2015

This is the first vintage that Château de Chamirey decided to bottle wine from this 3.5-acre vineyard separately. Half went into this bottling, while the other half went into their village Mercurey blend. Although not from a premier cru vineyard, this 2015 tastes like a premier cru wine.

An exceptionally glossy texture combined with bright red fruit flavors and a hint of earthiness makes it a delight to drink now.

93 Michael Apstein Mar 20, 2018

Château de Chamirey Mercurey 2016

(Burgundy, France)

Mercurey, an often-overlooked village in the Côte Chalonnaise, is home to well-priced authentic Burgundy, both red and white.

In this era of stratospheric prices for Burgundies, consumers should search for wines from this village. Château de Chamirey, one of the finest producers in the Côte Chalonnaise, made a superb array of Mercurey wines in 2016. This one, a blend of roughly 10 vineyards they own, is remarkably suave for a village wine.

With bright raspberry-like fruit and mild tannins, it is ready to drink now, but should developed nicely over the next several years.

90 Michael Apstein Mar 20, 2018

Château de Chamirey